Systems-Centered Training

Living human systems survive, develop, and transform by discriminating and integrating differences. Systems-Centered Training (SCT) is a practical and innovative systemic approach that teaches how to take up one's role as an agent of change, both for the self and for other living human systems (individuals, groups, organizations). Pioneered by Yvonne Agazarian, SCT begins with the idea that we are always in a system, be it the system of ourselves as a person, a couple, a family, a team, or a whole organization. SCT posits that these different systems heavily influence how we function within them. Our ongoing challenge is how to contribute to building the kind of systems in which we want to live and work. At this conference we will explore the "us vs. them" dynamic and the methods and tools that can shift any system toward collaboration.

Save by staying at the Hotel Kabuki!

The conference is being held at the Hotel Kabuki, a boutique hotel with a unique blend of Eastern and Western influences offering sleek and serene accommodations in the heart of Japantown. Enjoy the shops and restaurants of Fillmore Street – or take in some of the area's world-class jazz music.

Receive a discount on your registration fees by staying at the Hotel Kabuki. Staying at the Hotel Kabuki supports the system by offsetting the cost of the conference for the organization, allowing us to avoid increasing registration fees.
